Last Wednesday forencon, Russell Meacham. farmer, who lived about two miles east of Kent, in company with his son went to the barn of Mr. Coburn, a neighbor, to get a hay fork pulley, which they used in common. In endeavoring to get the pulley, which was suspend d from the purline plate, he placed a ladder esting upon the scaffold, against the rafter attached to the plate. In reaching for the puley, while at the top of the ladder, the latter irned, and in attempting to save himself, Mr. Meacham caught a slight hold with one hand, which soon gave way, and he fell a distance of 20 feet to the barn floor, striking on his head receiving injuries from which he died at I o'clock on the same day. He never regained consciousness. He leaves a wife and four children. He was a son' of George Meacham, of Brimfield, and was a man of extensive acquaintance, com manding the respect and esteem of a large circle sunday in town with his brother, W. E. Swain. of friends. His funeral was held from the house at 9 o'clock Friday forenoon, and at 10:20 from the Brimfield Universalist Church, Rev. Andrew
